

Welcome Lorna and Bill Goldberg

Apt.# 305

Bill and Lorna Goldberg are clinical social workers and psychoanalysts in private practice who have been married for 58 years. When they first met, they were both politically active college students, and that interest has endured. They've lived most of their lives in New Jersey, where they raised their son, Ben, who now lives in Providence. Bill worked for 36 years at the Rockland County, NY, Department of Mental Health as Program Director for Rehabilitative Services. He also taught social work and sociology at Dominican College. Lorna has worked with children and adolescents as well as adults. She recently retired as Director of the Institute for Psychoanalytic Studies in Fair Lawn, N.J. Lorna and Bill both teach courses in this postgraduate training program for therapists.

For the past 50 years, Bill and Lorna have specialized in working with former cult members. They co-facilitate a support group that first met in their living room and has since met online because of the pandemic. Lorna is the Past President of the International Cultic Studies Association and served on the ICSA Board for many years.

Bill is an amateur magician and a skeptic who enjoys going to movies, plays, and museums with Lorna. They are both avid readers. Their musical tastes range from classical to folk to '60s rock, and don't get them started on how much they love Bruce Springsteen.

They are excited to join the Laurelmead community.
